1. ZINZINO SOCIAL SELLING GUIDE

Get ready, health warriors! Grab a highlighter, print out this resource and sprawl it across your desk. This guide will answer the What, Why, How and When to use Social Media to build your online business.

Leverage the tips and advice in this guide, as you connect with others and grow your business. As one of the most successful, global direct-selling companies in health and wellness, we can tell you, social media works. It's part of our success story.

Health is an industry that's adored on social media. People love recipes, workout videos, inspiration shots, and methods to optimise their health. It's why Zinzino exists in this world.

What's more, it's free! However... being 'seen' or, better still, getting noticed, is the challenge.

You might upload content constantly, and still not gain traction. There are hundreds of variables that make a post successful or not... like when you post, what you share, and who's seeing it.

This guide aims to clarify, simplify and amplify your Social Media strategy. While it won't replace the intimate conversations and face-to-face meetings, your social media profile presence can help boost engagement to do this.

Before we get there, first, it's important to define your brand.

WHO ARE YOU?

Yes, you're helping people with Zinzino's breakthrough food supplement products but they're buying from YOU.

Cut through their resistance by showing your personality. Allow the space for people to know, trust, and love you. Direct selling is a people business, after all.

Let your communications celebrate your personality and philosophy. Ensure congruency between your online and in-person brand. In other words, just be yourself. List themes that are meaningful to you and the topics you love to talk about – this will help map out content that you enjoy creating and people always want more of.

Here are some themes to get you thinking:

- Healthy Lifestyle Lover
- Mumpreneur
- Fitness guru
- Vegan
- Interior stylist
- Movie buff
- Musician
- Philosopher
- Foodie
- Yogi
- Wine connoisseur

Remember, online, consistency is everything.

Relationships take time to build, especially online. Aim to post once a day and think about this as a trust-building exercise. This gives your audience a reason to return to your page and shows them you're worth the follow.

Make sure that you post meaningful content. While we've covered the importance of conveying your brand story, it shouldn't all be about you. Stuck for ideas? Use the three E's formula: Educate, Entertain and Empower.

Put yourself in their shoes. What would you want to see, learn, and engage with? We'll cover this more in greater depth later.

If you think, 'no, I'm not good on video', this is for you. See, your audience doesn't expect you to create high-quality, cinematic work. Raw, one-on-one iPhone-filmed clips show your personality better and gives your audience the opportunity to 'get to know you.' Your imperfect 'realness' is the key.

Your audience needs to feel like they know you. Video is one of the best ways to do this because they can see, hear and get to know your personality.

- Share your journey with Zinzino products, particularly for new releases
- Film a meal preparation session, following a high-omega recipe
- Create a 'get ready with me' video, that touches on when you use Zinzino
- Share your favourite looks, movies, books and profiles, right now
- A 'walk through my home' video
- A 'ten things you might not know about me' video
- An 'answering your questions' series
- A 'story time' series, where you bring viewers into your life (show your city, friends, family, recent holidays etc.) – sell the lifestyle

The rule with online marketing is constantly trying (and testing) different approaches... and find your brand (and your Zinzino) groove.

THE 3 E'S. THE RECIPE FOR GREAT CONTENT

With daily posting, it can be easy to lose your creative steam. But you don't have to reinvent the wheel. This is what the E 3's are for.

Are your followers skipping over your posts?
Not getting as many likes and comments as before?
Finding it difficult to keep the momentum?

Do this...

Go back over the last 10 posts on Facebook and Instagram. How many likes, comments and shares do they have? Is your engagement coming from family and friends, or potential customers and team members?

Is Mum or your Best Friend liking a lot? Ask yourself: is this content really appealing? Does the content appeal to them? Is it something THEY'D want to see? Is your brand story weaved in?

If not, use the 3 E's as your content pillars: Educate, Entertain and Empower 7.

DOES YOUR CONTENT...
EDUCATE, ENTERTAIN OR EMPOWER?

Avoid a content block by alternating between Education, Entertain and Empowering posts. For educational content, teach the audience something new. Position yourself as a thought-leader in health and wellness. Think how-tos, reviews, before and after stories, expert interviews, and Q&As.

Now for entertaining posts, mix lesson-rich content with fun content that help the audience get to know you. Post stories about your weekend trips, reels of you cooking, and photos of your family.

Some examples of entertaining videos could include:

- Your morning routine
- Holiday videos
- Introducing your family
- Your health journey
- Personal goals.

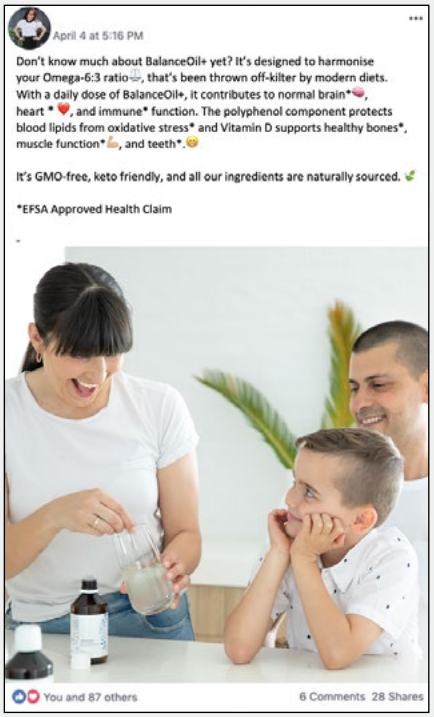

Use your channels to give your viewers an inside look into your life.
Build a community, not just followers.

And then, empowering content. Blend this fun content with empowering posts such as quotes, workout videos, a tell-all IGTV video, and anything that you feel inspired by.

This is the type of content that stops you, ignites an emotion, and gets you thinking. It's often tied to a problem that an audience is having. Let's use an off-balance Omega-6:3 ratio as an example. You could start with your own initial BalanceTest results, to gain trust and strengthen your brand story.

Aim for Zinzino to be part of the solution. But this isn't a hard and fast rule. If someone can benefit from your advice alone, that's okay. Remember, this is a people business.

Tip: Your posts should always cover at least one of the three E's.

GIVE YOUR AUDIENCE...
WHAT THEY WANT

When people click on your page, they expect to be either entertained or distracted (whether they're aware of it or not). The more you dig deeper into your brand themes, the more you'll understand what your audience responds to. Use the notes section of your phone to make a list of ideas, when inspiration strikes. If 'health nut' is one of your themes, spend time researching on Google, Instagram, Pinterest, and the likes.

As you're crafting your content, there's another important formula to keep in mind: the three C's.

You want your posts to be Clear. Know the purpose of each piece of content and how it's adding value, not clutter. It should be Creative, with a strong voice (your brand story). And, it needs to be Concise.

BALANCING A PERSONAL BRAND, WITH PRODUCTS

There's a delicate balance between showcasing your personality and managing the commercial side on your social media. Ignore the products and people will just think you have a lifestyle page. But if you're too salesy, people will just keep scrolling.

Learn to read your audience to better understand the content mix. Be bold, spark curiosity, sell authentically, and be conscious of their time. Be reliable, consistent, and accessible – just a message away.

10. IDEAS FOR PRODUCT-RELATED POSTS

Keep brand themes and personality traits in mind. Follow the three E's and C's, and endeavour to create content that drives engagement and stops that unconscious scroll.

Here are some suggestions to begin your product posts list.

- Share before and after photos of yourself. Let the images 'speak' for you.
- Show yourself incorporating the products into your lifestyle
- Use live video to engage with your audience – answer questions, tell your story, discuss issues.
- Introduce your team and talk about the benefits of the products (please only use the official product text which you will find on the Zinzino website, Zinzino marketing materials or official Facebook/Instagram pages.
- Creative ways to 'not forget' taking the product, if it requires daily usage
- Share healthy recipe ideas that include Zinzino products

11. COMPLIANCY, IN THE HEALTH & WELLNESS SPHERE

Given your business and brand operates in the health and wellness industry, it's essential not to make any false claims. All content involving Zinzino products should not promote any medical claims or replace tailored advice to the individual.

Although our products are scientifically proven, focus on sharing the benefits, not broad claims. With every health benefit, please use an asterisk to reference the formal approval. Stick to the Zinzino guidelines or check with your upline.

This is how to reference a Zinzino health claim:

(EU)
EFSA Approved Health Claim*

(USA)
 These statements have not been evaluated by the Food and Drug Administration. This product is not intended to diagnose, treat, cure, or prevent any disease.*

(Australia)
Always read the label. Use only as directed, if symptoms persist, please contact your healthcare professional.*

Steer clear from terminology like “it cured”, “the best in the market”, “it can do the same for you”, “no side effects” and “visible results.”

Let the client find out for themselves how great the Zinzino products are.

The same goes for the language you use to grow your team. “I made $1K in one week”, “fast cash” and “guaranteed success” are all non-compliant phrases. No income claims are permitted.

It’s extremely important to include a disclaimer, any time you’re sharing your story.

Zinzino does not guarantee any level of income for any Zinzino Partner. The actual income of Zinzino Partners varies depending on each Partner’s skill, effort and time commitment.*

12. GROW YOUR FACEBOOK FOLLOWING

So, you've solidified your brand story and are busy creating great content. Now you're wondering, how can I get more people to see my posts.

With a million links shared, over four million photos and 700,000+ status updates every 20 minutes, it's easy to get lost in the cloud clutter.

You want to please Facebook's algorithm, (the invisible mathematical formula that assigns a score to every post). The best way to do this is through engagement. The more likes, comments, views and shares you get, the more 'engaging' your profile is... and the higher your score.

Now for a little 'how to do Facebook' lesson.

How often to post

Facebook favours quality, not quantity. Focus on delivering high-quality content to your audience. Create real conversations with people. Post up to three times per day, with the posts spread out a few hours apart.

Certain posts not getting much traction? You can hide them and replace with a different piece.

The general rule: For every 10 posts, aim for two to three product-related posts. These could be images of the products you have created yourself, or you can use the catalogue of approved Zinzino Partner product images.

Here are some examples of our Partner approved Social Media Images
You can find these images in the Zinzino App or also in the File Library under 'social media' in your back office.

Take the time to tidy up your personal page, too.

Treat your personal profile professionally, as well as your business page, because you're the face of your Zinzino company, let it double as your business page. Add a nice headshot, tweak the content to align with your brand themes, and always be professional.

Tap into your personal circle, respectfully. These people already know and trust you. Keep the three E's in mind when you're creating content for your network. You don't want to be 'that friend who people feel bad to unfollow but do, just because it's suddenly all business on your page.

The types of Facebook posts

With a focus on engagement through value, the next question is, what should I post? Let's go through the different options, starting with a good old-fashioned profile post.

Facebook profile posts

These are permanent posts on your personal profile. You have a profile and a business page. Profile posts are visible in the newsfeed of your friends, not the public. Offering content that's of value is important, as you're in the personal sphere.

Don't post long-winded essays. Use imagery and emojis, with a short, succinct and impactful message. Remember, Facebook looks for posts that people are engaging with, so Educate, Entertain, and Empower. Make sure the content is original. Feed the algorithm with fresh, insightful information. If you do like an article, copy the link and create a new post (rather than hitting 'share').

Facebook Stories

You're probably all over Instagram Stories, but they're popular on Facebook, too. Thanks, SnapChat, for priming us. Give your audience a snapshot into your life, in real-time, using the story function.

Your content disappears within 24 hours, unlike posts. Need ideas for your stories?

- Share a teaser of an event you attend, personal or professional
- Use the fun features of Facebook Stories, such as filters
- Ask a question and encourage your audience to private message you
- Find out who's 'watching you' and skew your content toward them
- Promote a Facebook live or a post, in a more engaging, personal way.

Speaking of Facebook Live...

Facebook Live

This is one of Facebook's coolest features. Instagram has also followed suit, with a live function. Facebook allows you to broadcast content in real-time as well as pre-promoting the event. "I'm going live in 3 hours!"

You can interact directly with your audience, asking questions on-the-spot and saying "hi" to viewers. This unstaged, raw approach helps strengthen connections and your viewers are more likely to comment and share your content.

All you need is a device and internet connection. Log into Facebook and you're good to go! The video remains active after the live stream, so you can use it in your promotions.

Don't let the live component put you off. Your audience cares about the depth of what you say, not how polished you are.

Follow these tips:

- Film your video vertically and make sure you're not having Wi-Fi issues
- Turn off Facebook notifications to prevent the screen pausing
- Ask questions and create reasons for people to comment. Remember that Facebook 'score' rating? More engagement = greater visibility.
- Go live in your main feed or stories
- End with a Call-to-Action – "let's continue this conversation in the Facebook comments."

13. THE 10-10 FORMULA

No matter what you're posting on Facebook, make sure you're active 10 minutes before. Engage with people's content by liking, commenting on and sharing their posts. This will 'alert' Facebook that you're active, as well as who your ideal prospects are.

Tip: Pick five friends who you haven't contacted in some time (who might be potential customers). Visit their profile and like their content. Comment on a few of their posts and photos. This will increase the likelihood of your content showing up in their newsfeed.

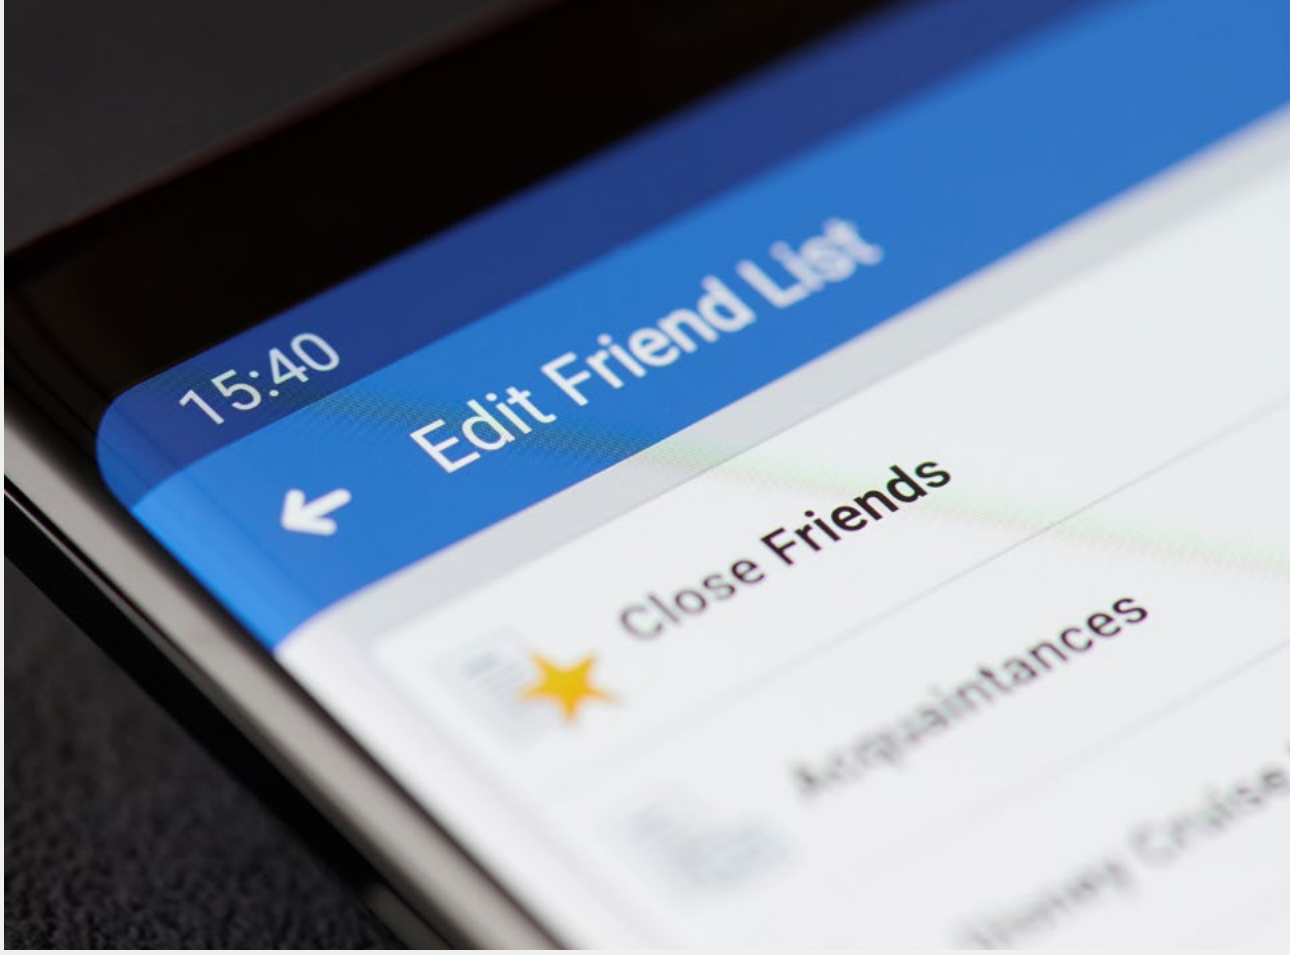

After you post, use the same strategy. Like, comment and engage with people who have given you a thumbs up. If a post gets traction within the first 10-15 minutes, it's deemed as 'valuable' in Facebook's eyes.

So, remember, 10 minutes before you post and another 10, after.

Getting more comments.

A simple approach to ignite conversations is to add a Call-To-Action (CTA) in each post. Encourage your audience to leave a comment. Ask questions, reply to your comments so people feel special, and experiment with ways to get them talking. It's good for relationship building and the algorithms love it, too.

If a post goes gangbusters, focus on drawing more people to that post instead of replacing it with a new one.

Creating Facebook lists.

Let's say you only have 10 minutes to dedicate to Facebook every day (not including carefree scrolling). Facebook has a private lists function, where you can quickly access the top people, you want to interact with.

People on your list won't know and you can update it anytime.

To create your own, click Friends List under Explore on the left side of the newsfeed. Create lists by adding names of people who you're friends with.

Keep expanding your network and connecting with people from different stages of your life. For example, search 'people who went to XYZ high school' or 'people who live in Sydney.' Look for mutual friends and introduce yourself. Avoid sending cold friend requests. It's not a sustainable strategy.

14. YOUR CLIENTS ARE IN THE 1 BILLION PEOPLE ON INSTAGRAM

If you're only on two platforms, it's got to be Facebook and Instagram. From story reels to long-form visual posts, IGTV and private messaging tool, this is where health and wellness content is most popular.

Do you know this about Instagram?

- Facebook owns Instagram, so it's good to be on both
- It has 500 million daily users – the second biggest social platform (after Facebook)
- 65% of users are 18-29, 40% are 30-49.

Unlike Facebook, Instagram is a discovery tool. You don't need to exist in your personal network. This makes it an effective relationship-creating connection asset. Just be sure not to concern yourself with vanity metrics (comparing likes and followers). While important, it's better to judge your profile on the quality of your content.

LETS START WITH YOUR INSTAGRAM PROFILE

Much of the philosophies and strategies we explored in the Facebook section apply to Instagram. But there are a few subtleties that'll make a big difference that are important to run through.

- Settings: Set your profile to 'Public.' This way, the whole world can see the content you're creating, not just your friends. If you tag locations, businesses or people in stories or posts, they will come up in the search function. For example, if you tag "Sydney Opera House', your post will be visible under the 'SydneyOperaHouse' hashtag or story reel.
- Username: Make this easily recognisable, as close your Facebook page as possible. Chances are if a prospect finds you on Facebook, they'll search for the same page name on Instagram (and vice versa).
- Picture: This should be of you. Remember, YOU are the brand. Don't put up the products or the Zinzino logo. Take a headshot that exudes your unique personality. Use the same photo for all social platforms, for consistency.

- Bio: An important element of your profile, your bio is essentially your 'elevator pitch'. You've got 150 characters to show your personality and tell your why. Go back to your brand themes and incorporate the top ones (alongside some fun emojis, because who doesn't love them).
- The Exit Link: Under your bio, you can place a link that'll guide your audience from Instagram to a specific website link of your choice. Use this important 'real estate' to link to your personal Zinzino website.
- Content: The only difference is the way your three E's are that delivered. On Instagram, every post must include an image or video. So, get comfortable telling your brand story, visually.
- Hashtags & Tags: No, they're not clutter. Hashtags are the way people discover you. Use them tastefully, by putting them in comment, after you've posted the image or video. Don't surpass 30 hashtags.

  If you're referencing a brand, profile or business location, use the 'tag people' function and check in with 'add location.'

Creating scroll-stopping posts

Because everything you publish should align with your brand themes, keep them handy. This will prevent you losing momentum and getting lost in the sea of posts, once you're back online. Facebook owns Instagram, remember. The algorithms apply here, too.

Use a mix of personal and professional photos.

Given Instagram is a visual platform, your photos can make or break a post. You might know the basics already, if you're active personally. The number of photos you can publish at once is 10. Followers simply 'swipe' to view the collage. Tag people who are in your images, so you catch their attention (and hopefully, their audiences).

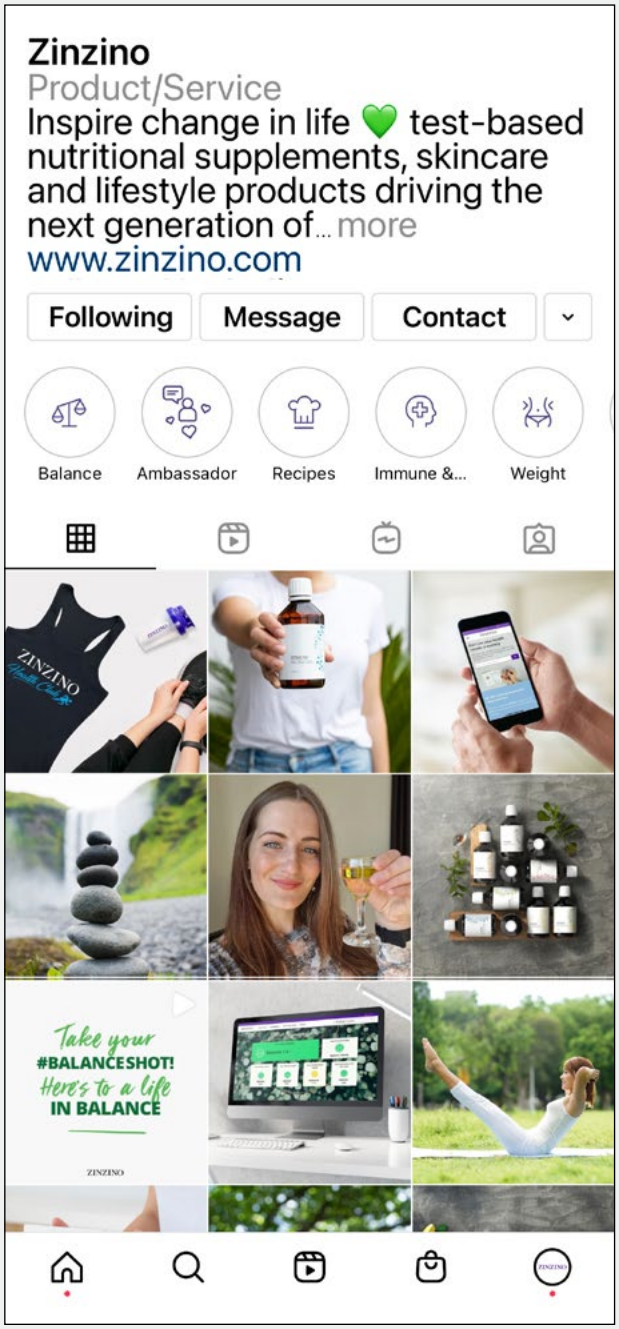

Try not to over-saturate your images, when filtering. You can jazz them up, but make sure they're realistic. To view the original image, just hold down on the image, while in the filtering section. With engagement and relationship-building being your focus, take the time to craft creative copy to go with the post. Aim for original content but if you do a reshare, credit the owner.

Now, let's jump into the various types of Instagram posts.

Instagram Posts

These are timeless posts that stay on your profile, unless deleted. For this reason, dedicate a few extra minutes to your posts, as they have a longer lifespan. Use either imagery or video, with between 15-30 hashtags (so people can keep rediscovering it, long after you've posted it). As a rule of thumb, try to post 3-7 Instagram posts per week.

Instagram Stories

Who doesn't love a fun boomerang clip? You can do them, too, with Instagram Stories. Your story will be available on your followers' home function, in the top reel. If you tag a business or location, it'll also come up for the public to view. To see for yourself, type in 'Sydney', pick the hashtag '#Sydney' and to the left of that public page, you'll see the story reel.

With InstaStories, you can post an image, video or use cool features like Boomerang, SuperZoom, and Music. You only have 15 seconds, and the story disappears after 24 hours. Give your viewers a backstage pass into your life (and business) with short, fun snippets.

How to create a Story:

1. Tap the plus (+) button on the top-right side of your home screen. You can also quickly launch Stories by swiping right from the main screen.

2. Tap the white circle button at the bottom of the screen to take photos or tap and hold to record a video. You can also choose to start a live event or a Boomerang or put the app in hands-free mode. To add photos or videos from your photo gallery, tap the photo icon in the lower-left side of the screen.

3. Edit the photos or videos. Add text, GIFs, stickers, polls, countdowns, questions, and 'swipe up' links. You can explore all of the different functions from the image icons on the top right of your screen.

4. Once you have finished editing your story, click on the Send to button in the bottom right of your screen

5. Here you can either share to Your Story or even share to your close friends only list.

6. Tap the Share button to share to your Story.

7. If you want to keep the story to your highlights reel. Simply click on the Add to highlights button.

Instagram Reels

The newest function available to Instagram, Instagram Reels allows you to take 15, 30 or 60-second video clips set to music and share them to your stories.

Even though Reels haven't been around for a huge amount of time, they are showing to be a space for brands and creators to lean into personalities.

Here are three ways you can use Instagram Reels in your marketing strategy:

- Create content that's authentic and resonating to your audience. Instagram Reels are a fast, fun way to create captivating, unique content packed with special effects.
- Share educational content. Use Reels to teach your followers something new. Show them how you take your daily #BalanceShot or adding your Zinzino products into your daily smoothie. Again, aim for subtly and creativity.
- Show off the Zinzino products in different ways. Increase your brand awareness and build your sales by using Reels to demonstrate what you have to offer.

Instagram Live & IGTV

This is just like Facebook Live. In the Story options, you can ‘Go Live’ and your top followers (or those who are active) will be notified. It disappears after 24 hours, just like any other Story. We recommend you use Instagram Live at least once a week.

Want to know something cool? If you have more than 10,000 followers, you can get your own Instagram television channel. You can post up to an hour long, so it’s great for tutorials, behind-the-scenes videos, and Q&As – all amazing features for your Zinzino business.

17. TWITTER

Fun fact: 310 million users monthly send 500 million tweets daily, 83% of which are on mobile.

Twitter is unlike other social channels. It's short-form and not visual like Instagram and Facebook. Twitter is a great way to find people to grow your team. Think of it like one big contact book.

Key tips:

- Hashtags help people with specific interests find your tweets. Don't overuse them; 1-3 is plenty. Treat them like keywords, and research them first.
- Posting and interacting should be a continuous process. You almost can't overdo Twitter, since the interactions are so quick and small.
- Use your 140 characters wisely. If you can't say it quickly on Twitter, you can't say it at all. And: Tweets shorter than 100 characters have a 17% higher engagement rate.
- Make sure you add a comment when retweeting. Do more than just a generic compliment.
- Make sure to mention (@theirname) users when linking to content they have created or shared; this will notify them that you mentioned them.

16. LINKEDIN

With close to 400 million users, LinkedIn is a prime place for prospecting, especially for new team recruits, as this is a professional social platform.

Key Tips:

- Posting too often here can go poorly, once a day is plenty.
- Make sure that your content is on message and is related to work.
- Share content from Zinzino's Official LinkedIn Page, our Independent Partner social assets supplied in your back office or share posts from zinzino.blog
- Language should be more professional than the other channels.
- Write personal connection requests and mention the reason why you are connecting with them. Generic "I'd like to add you to my professional network on LinkedIn" is not enough to sway prospects and can be perceived as too generic. This is the perfect opportunity to weave in your brand voice.

18. HASHTAG ETIQUETTE

You can thrive on Facebook without hashtags. But on Instagram, where hashtags are currency, it's a different ball game. Hashtags are the currency of Instagram. If used correctly, they can help you grow your followers, engagement, and hopefully, customers!

Here are some of the hashtags do's and don'ts:

- The 'search engine' of Instagram. People find you through hashtags. It's not a platform that only showcases to your followers (unless you have it set to private). Users explore different images and profiles. It's normal for your followers to be people you don't know, as much as those who you do.
- Create your own custom hashtags to use repeatedly in posts. Go back to your brand themes. Draft a list of common hashtags you can draw from, so you don't have to research every time you post something.
- Aim for 11-15 hashtags per post, and no more than 30. Consider creating 10 original hashtags, five that are relevant to your post, another five attributing your location or event, and a few more general, popular hashtags.
- When choosing hashtags, look for those with 1,500 – 10,000 uses. The sweet spot is 5,000 uses. There are tools online to help you generate the most appropriate hashtags, such as Hashtagify.

Tip: Either put your hashtags in a separate comment OR include them at the bottom of your caption, with spaces and full stops in-between, so they're not as visible.

Focus on engagement, not likes

Produce good-quality content and you'll experience the true power of social media – a free way to connect with people all around the world. Strike up direct conversations with people, treat it as a networking tool, be active on other people's profiles, and stand behind everything you post. The goal is to create and build these relationships socially, then take them offline - turn them unto clients or team members.

Growing your Facebook & Instagram audience... without spending a dollar on advertising.

Okay, so you've got your profiles all set up and they're starting to fill in with great content. We've explored some of the non-negotiable strategies (like hashtags) to follow to start growing your profiles. If you can showcase who you are, convey your brand themes and constantly produce meaningful content, you'll thrive on social media.

With a strong persona, now it's time for healthy, fun, aligned outreach.

Join Facebook Groups

The underrated gem of Facebook, the Groups feature allows you to connect with people who share common interests. You'll find all sorts of Groups, based on location, themes, and specific brands. For example, 'business owners in Adelaide' or 'Girls Who Travel'. The energy is different in these private Facebook Groups.

They're more personal and members unite to support each other, build their networks, and solve problems. Often, you need an invite to join these groups, so it's an intimate place. Oh, and don't forget to join our Team Zinzino Facebook groups for all the important Partner information. You can see all of the different market's pages at the end of this document.

A word of warning: You do not want to spam people in groups with salesy messages. Instead, provide advice and support, which over time, sparks their interest in YOU (and your business). Get to know the people in your chosen groups by liking and responding to comments and sending private messages.

Follow Instagram Influencers

There will be 'influencers' in your field (or adjacent to) who you can target, to access their loyal fans. Brainstorm a list of influencers who you respect, aligned to your Zinzino business, and follow them. Like and comment on their posts, stories and live videos. This strategy does two important things:

1. Sparks the attention of the influencer
2. 'Tells' Instagram the type of people who you want to follow you

The best way to approach this? Using hashtags, of course. For example, search #HealthyLifestyle #WellnessWarrior and other tags related to your personal brand.

Strategically Like & Comment

This is an extension of point two, right above. The more you interact with similar Instagram accounts, the higher the chance that their audiences will see your content. Complementary profiles will also come up in your feed more, giving you access to more of 'your' people.

Don't overdo this or go on a liking rampage. Just choose five accounts you love and spend 10 minutes a day leaving comments on the different profiles. For your top one or two, dedicate time going through old posts and commenting on them. You'll unearth many old prospects here. Oh, and it goes without saying, always comment back on any interactions you receive.

Send Direct Messages

This is as close to a one-on-one meeting as you can get, online. But you don't want to push for it too soon. Don't copy and paste anything. Be authentic and tailor individual messages to every person you reach out to – ideally, after they've acknowledged you from a previous conversation in a comment.

Keep your direct messages short and sweet, weaving in that interaction, if possible, so they can quickly recall who you are.

Spot the Time-Wasters

Yes, it's important to respond to everyone. But, there will be instances where certain followers send you messages for no reason. They might simply connect with your message or need someone to talk to, and they picked you.

Determine personal protocols to help you navigate interactions with followers. Take a look at their profile and decide if it is someone who you want to build a relationship with. Among your potential prospects, you'll find a mixed bag of friends and admirers. Maintain the conversations as long as you feel like they're natural and intuitively right for you – without overcompensating or giving too much of your time.

Play the long game...

As with all social media efforts, invest in the long-term. It's easy to feel like you're doing something wrong, if you start to play the comparison game. The algorithm also needs time to monitor your activity.

Stay in your own lane, focus on quality content, not vanity metrics. Ask yourself, 'am I showcasing my brand themes and creating relationship-building content?'

Use the three E's as your support pillars. Be patient, consistent and follow the strategies we covered in this guide. Whether it's clients, new contacts or an endless source of inspiration, you'll find it on Facebook and Instagram.

Offline Relationships.

Although this guide is designed to help you build relationships offline, we can't discount the value of face-to-face interactions. This social media strategy should work in harmony with in-person relationship building.

Always look for ways to build your audience and team in your everyday life. Be open to bringing your online connections offline, whether that's in a phone call or a coffee catch-up. Let your social media channels keep your personal brand top of mind... but also keep real-world relationships at the forefront of yours.

This is a people's business, after all.
